DEVELOPMENT PERMIT APPLICATION FAQs

Note: these guidelines are intended to assist landowners in determining the requirements for development. The development process follows all County policies and Provincial policies which may be difficult to interpret without having prior experience with development. If you have questions pertaining to these policies, please contact Beaver County or a Professional Planner for clarification. If you have questions about the information provided, please contact the Beaver County Planning & Development Department.

INITIAL DEVELOPMENT QUESTIONS

1. What is a development in Beaver County?

Development in Beaver County is regulated by Land Use Bylaw 98-801, as amended. Most development requires a development permit and is defined in the Bylaw as follows:

- an excavation or stockpile and the creation of either of them, or
- a building or an addition to, or replacement or repair of a building and the construction or placing of any of them in, on, over or under land, or
- a change of use of land or a building or an act done in relation to land or a building that results in or is likely to result in a change in the use of the land or building, or
- a change in the intensity of use of land or a building or an act done in relation to land or a building that results in or is likely to result in a change in the intensity of use of the land or building.

The definition also includes the demolition or removal of a building or the placement of an already constructed or partially constructed building on a lot.

2. When do I need a development permit?

Most development in Beaver County requires a development permit. The following development does not require a development permit, although other permits under the Alberta Safety Codes Act or other legislation or regulations may be required:

- Maintenance or repair to any building that does not include any structural alterations or major works of renovation including:
 - a. Minor utilities, the definition of which shall be as determined at the sole discretion of the Development Authority;
 - b. Private driveways and patios accessory to a dwelling;
 - c. An unenclosed deck or a deck enclosed by a rail or parapet wall, with a floor less than 1 m (3.3 ft.) in elevation above grade;
 - d. Landscaping where the existing grade and surface drainage pattern is not materially altered;
 - e. The erection or construction of gates, fences, or walls or other means of enclosure may be exempted from a development permit based on the height, location and land use district;
 - f. The demolition or removal of a building or improvement.
- For further information, please contact the Planning & Development Department.

3. Who can apply for a development permit?

The registered owner(s) of the land or an authorized person acting on the landowner(s) behalf may apply for a development permit. Most of the time, the landowner applies for the Development Permit and Building Permits, and the specific trades apply for the Electrical, Gas, Plumbing and Private Sewage Disposal Permits.

4. How long does it take to get a Development Permit?

Processing times for a Development Permit application vary depending on the type of development. The Development Authority must make a decision on a Development Application within 40 days of receipt of the completed application, although typically development approval is granted much sooner. A permitted use permit is usually issued within 8-10 working days. Discretionary use permits usually take 4-6 weeks due to extra processing requirements.

5. What is the difference between permitted and discretionary use?

There are two types of uses in every district: permitted and discretionary. Permitted uses are approved by the Development Authority upon meeting the regulations in the Land Use Bylaw. Decisions cannot be appealed unless the provisions of the Land Use Bylaw were relaxed, varied, or misinterpreted. Discretionary uses are assessed and approved on a case-by-case basis on the compatibility and impact of the proposed development with adjacent developments and the surrounding area. Discretionary permits may be referred to adjacent landowners and various agencies for comments. Once a decision is made, the permit will be advertised for two consecutive weeks in the Beaver County Chronicle. Compliance with the County Municipal Development Plan and Land Use Bylaws are required for all development/uses.

6. How close to the property lines can we build?

The setbacks to the property lines vary depending on the land use district in which the property is located and the type of road that is adjacent. Contact the Planning & Development Department to get exact information on the setback requirements in your particular land use district.

7. What is a variance?

A variance means a deviation from the existing regulations as outlined in the Land Use Bylaw. This includes, but is not limited to, lot sizes and widths, and building setbacks and heights. A variance cannot be used to change the use or density of a property.

8. Once I have a Development Permit, how long is it valid?

If the development authorized by a permit is not commenced within twelve (12) months from the date of its issue, the permit is deemed void, unless an extension to this period has been granted by the Development Authority prior to the expiry date.

9. What if my development is refused?

A decision of a development permit or a refusal may be appealed to the Subdivision and Development Appeal Board. You or your authorized agent may appeal a decision of refusal, or any condition attached to an approval. To appeal, you must send a written notice, stating reasons, and the $200 appeal fee within 21 days of the date of decision to the Development Authority. Upon receipt of a notice of appeal, the Board will determine if there are valid grounds to hear the appeal. If an appeal is accepted, the Board will hear your arguments regarding the decision as well as any arguments put forward by the Development Authority or affected parties. The Board has the authority to uphold the Development Authority's decision, reverse the decision or change any of the conditions attached to the decision.

10. What other permits are needed for my project?

If you are located within 0.8 km (0.5 mile) of a primary or secondary highway, you must get approval from Alberta Transportation by completing an Alberta Transportation Roadside Application. Once a development permit is issued, you may also require Safety Codes Permits, including the following: Building Permit, Electrical Permit, Gas Permit, Plumbing Permit and Private Sewage Disposal Permit. You must obtain the appropriate permits prior to the start of construction. Safety Codes Permit applications are available on the County's website and the County Service Centre in Ryley, or through The Inspections Group at 1-866-554-5048.

11. Who do we contact to obtain approval for an access approach to our property?

The Infrastructure Department can assist in the process of obtaining approval for approaches to rural properties. They can be reached at 780-663-3730.

Please note:

- The Development Authority may refuse to accept your application if the required information has not been supplied or is inadequate to properly evaluate the Development Permit application.
- If the Development Permit application is approved for a Permitted Use, the applicant will be notified in writing.
- If the Development Permit is approved for a Discretionary Use the applicant will be notified in writing. The permit does not become valid until the Development Permit has been advertised for two consecutive weeks in the Beaver County Chronicle. Following that, there will be a fourteen (14) day appeal period. If there are no appeals against the development at the end of the appeal period, the Development Permit is considered valid, and development may commence.
- A municipal address sign must be erected within 3 months of the development permit being issued. Failure to erect a municipal address sign may result in fines.
